

WHO WE ARE

Brick Gardens is a social enterprise that converts vacant land and buildings into urban farms and vertical farm houses providing fresh, healthy produce to areas of Cincinnati considered food deserts.

Brick Gardens has repurposed vacant space in Bond Hill, Evanston, Madisonville, Northside, and Roselawn.

For 4+ years Brick Gardens has partnered with Groundwork Ohio River Valley creating the region's largest minority-owned workforce development and food access organization.

Throughout 2023 Brick Gardens successfully completed its yearlong partnership with Citizens of the World Charter School in Madisonville.

In 2022 Brick Gardens Founder, Domanique Peebles was named chair of the Food Focus subcommittee for the Green Cincinnati Plan. He runs community input discussions throughout the year to identify and make recommendations to Mayor Aftab Pureval for city support around food access.

Dominique was also named a General Interest Board Member for the Hamilton County Solid Waste Committee and speaks to the committee on behalf of Hamilton County citizens.

ALIGNED BRICK GARDENS FUNDERS

- Support initiatives that create impact in the areas of food security, workforce development, community development, and education in the Greater Cincinnati region
- Provide grant funding in the range of $25-50,000, intended as a contribution to a total of $100-150,000 in expenses for Brick Gardens' indoor and outdoor farming operation and programming costs
- Look for evidence of community support and sustainability through existing partnerships
- Expect to invest in a team with significant industry knowledge to successfully support an urban agriculture operation, as well as the business expertise to operate a financially sustainable model and reduce reliance on foundation support over time
- Look for key differentiators and competitive advantage- not only in the social impact generated by Brick Gardens, but also in the operational model as urban farming becomes an increasingly populated market
